AREA WOMAN MOVES TO CAVE

MS. DEAVEN IN HER NEW HOME.

Bandelier, NM – Jennifer Deaven, almost 40, has moved into a primitive pueblo indian cave to avoid the stress caused by unfinished house projects, in what doctors believe is the first diagnosed case of acute ‘domicilitus.’ Ms. Deaven grew weary of the never-ending string of projects required to finish her Wisconsin dwelling. “Thinking about the kitchen tile backsplash, the window seat in the living area, and the reading lights in the master bedroom just about killed me,” said Jennifer, referring to several completely unstarted projects which are unlikely to start anytime soon. “This cave is simple, fully constructed, and has no noisy contractors or procrastinating husbands.” Ms. Deaven discovered her cave on a family outing to Bandelier National Monument while visiting relatives in New Mexico.

DENTAL-RETENTION CAUSING PROBLEMS

DELAFIELD, WI – Mia Deaven, 5, is fond of her baby teeth. Even when the teeth are hanging by mere threads of flesh, she is not prepared to lose them without a fight. “Please cut the kernels off of my corn, Dad,” she was overheard telling her patient father this year. “I don’t want to lose a tooth.” The tooth – her first – came out anyway.

BEACH VACATION TURNS DEADLY

THE DEAVEN CHILDREN SINKING IN QUICKSAND.

GALVESTON, TX – Hopes for a joyous Corkill 50th wedding anniversary celebration on the beach were dashed this November when quicksand threatened to claim the lives of the grandchildren. The celebration was scheduled to take place at the Seacastle beach house, just west of town. Five couples and four children arrived and stayed at the beach house. Two of the children, Aidan Deaven and Josh Nitzberg, dug a hole on the beach almost to Japan before realizing that the hole would fill with water and become quick. Once full, the hole claimed the lives of several beachcombers “who should not have been on our beach anyway” according to Judy Corkill, who was attempting to celebrate her 50th wedding anniversary. In between near death experiences and retrieving bodies from the quicksand pit, the families enjoyed collecting shells, playing games, relaxing, and sightseeing in Galveston. On Thursday they celebrated “Thanksgiving,” a holiday dedicated to welcoming strangers into one’s family.

FLOWER GIRL TO BRIDE: ‘WHO, ME?’

MS. DEAVEN (RIGHT) QUESTIONING HER ROLE IN POST-CEREMONIAL PHOTO-OP.

AUSTIN, TX – Rebecca Corkill needed a flower girl for her wedding, and so she turned to her niece Mia Deaven, 5, for help. Ms. Deaven did exhibit a propensity for questioning the minimal expectations for her role in the proceedings. At several key points she was overheard questioning the expectations which she herself had encouraged by accepting the position of flower girl in the first place. “Do I have to walk down the aisle alone?” “Do I really need to be in this picture?” “Why can’t I have cake first?” and other questions from Ms. Deaven were mostly fielded by her father, David. “No.” “Yes.” “Because I said so.” are the correct answers to these particular questions, according to Mr. Deaven.

TRUCK FEARED DEAD

THE BEST TRUCK IN THE WORLD, AT THE TWIN OAKS GARAGE.

TWIN OAKS GARAGE OF EVER-LASTING HOPE, WI – After almost 20 years of reliable service, the red 1986 Toyota driven and maintained by David Deaven, 40, is gone. Rumors are circulating that the truck still lives, since Mr. Deaven donated its carcass to a local family desperate for transportation and knowledgeable in automotive repair. “I could have fixed it, you know,” said a misty-eyed Deaven. A senior garage official expressed her doubts.

VADER CHOOSES FAIRY APPRENTICE

MR. VADER AND HIS NEW APPRENTICE.

DEATH STAR, SOMEWHERE BEYOND THE OUTER RIM – Unsatisfied with his ability to strike fear into the heart of any living creature, restless to move beyond the power of the dark side of the force, Darth Vader announced today that he will be taking on a new apprentice in the form of a small pink fairy. “This alliance will give me additional darkish pink power – with her I will wipe out the rebellion once and for all,” Mr. Vader said. “I like playing barbies. Trick or Treat!” said the fairy apprentice.

BEND IT LIKE AIDAN

MR. DEAVEN ON THE FIELD.

WALES, WI – Aidan Deaven, 7, has decided that he will return to the field and continue to play in the next season. Mr. Deaven had a great year on the field, scoring several goals and learning how to actually pass the ball to other teammates.

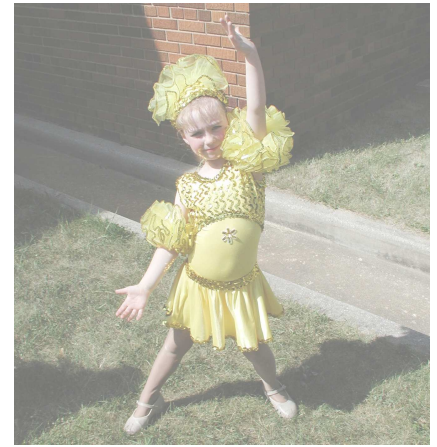

CATS INFEST WOMAN

MS. DEAVEN DURING THE INFESTATION.

ST. LOUIS, MO – Humane Society officials here are puzzled by the testimony of a Wisconsin woman who has become infested with cats. “I just kept buying cats from the Humane Society,” Mrs. Jennifer Deaven of Delafield, WI, said. “As I brought more and more of them home, my house was more and more infested with cats.” A humane society spokesperson recommended she buy adequate food, before the cats “go crazy and get a taste for human flesh.”

CHA-CHA MIA!

“MIA” IN A CLASSIC CHA-CHA POSE.

NEW YORK, NY – Broadway booking agents are buzzing with excitement as they jockey for a chance to book the exquisite dancer known only as “Mia.” Although she is very young, “Mia” has a commanding stage presence, and has played venues as large as the Kettle Moraine High School auditorium.

AREA MAN POSES AS BOBCAT OPERATOR

MR. DEAVEN WRECKING A YARD.

SUMMIT, WI – Police here are still searching for area man Dave Deaven, who posed as a bobcat operator in order to convince the Cutting family lawn. This misrepresentation was subsequently discovered by the Cuttings when it became obvious that Mr. Deaven had never driven a bobcat before. “He lurched around the yard, almost rolling it, and dug deep ruts into the ground,” said Melissa Cutting. “And it took all day.”
