

The Chronicles of Deaven

HE'S NO JEDI

MR. DEAVEN.

WALES, WI – Local student Aidan Deaven, 17, demonstrated his commitment to the Life of An Athlete by playing football and basketball for his high school. There were scattered eyewitness reports of high jumping as a track and field jedi, but these were denied by experts, including Jabba, a Hut spox.

LET THE WOOKIEE WIN

MS. DEAVEN AND HER FATHER.

BURLINGTON, VT – Bernie Sanders' campaign staff were dismayed to learn that they shipped a tee shirt to Mia Deaven, 15, who will not be an eligible voter in the 2016 presidential race. Ms. Deaven's father, David, ordered two shirts and staff naturally assumed one was intended for Aidan Deaven, who will vote in the election. According to campaign manager Jeff Weaver, "the shirt went to Mia, and we have since learned that Aidan favors Donald Trump." As of printing deadline, the Deaven family is planning an intervention.

NOW THIS IS PODRACING

THE FASTEST PODRACER EVER BUILT, BEFORE (TOP) AND AFTER (BOTTOM).

MILWAUKEE MILE, WI – Riding in her newly-assembled 1998 Jeep TJ, local high school student Mia Deaven, 15, explained how she did it. "My Dad promised me we could buy a fixer-upper and we could fix anything together," said Mia. "Turns out the frame was completely rusted out, but I really liked this jeep so I decided to keep it." According to Mia's father, "replacing the frame with a factory new frame was a lot of work." Many bystanders agreed, although wise uncle Bill discounted the amount of work in advance, giving his sage advice: "It's only nuts and bolts."

IT'S WORKING

PROUD OWNERS.

TWIN OAKS PARK, WI – Visitors to Twin Oaks Park, nestled in the foothills of Wisconsin's Lapham Peak, enjoy thrilling rides on the park's newest attraction, a roller coaster with a 20' drop, winding through the oak and hickory trees. The coaster was conceived, designed, and built by Aidan Deaven and his friend J.T. Many learned engineering, construction, and fabrication skills came in handy as did a father with a welder and a care-free attitude to (a) danger and (b) lawn care. "I'm growing kids, not grass," growled the elder Deaven, repeating wisdom lifted directly from the comic strip Family Circus.

SHE SEEMS TO BE ON TOP OF THINGS

HER HIGHNESS.

DOUSMAN, WI – Graduating from middle school and starting as a freshman is suiting Mia Deaven, 15, well. High School for Health Sciences (HS²) director Steve Plum told this reporter that "Mia has edge." Ms. Deaven is working at Oconomowoc Hospital and learning paramedic skills as part of HS² curriculum, as well as taking AP Statistics as a freshman.

POWER... INFINITE POWER!

LIFTING.

WINTER PARK, CO – Continuing a sacred tradition, the Wisconsin Deavens once again skied this Colorado park. The snow was glorious and the elder Deaven was able to follow his children, though a few double-black runs on the back side of the mountain required more power. "Dad is slow in the steeps and trees," said Aidan Deaven, sitting at the lift waiting for the old man to catch up, already.

THE FORCE IS STRONG IN THIS ONE

MS. DEAVEN WITH CHOCOLATE, LEFT, AND TREE, RIGHT.

OSHKOSH, WI – Fall and winter traditions include a trip to Hughes chocolate – a diversion from the annual three-day Oshkosh swim meet – and picking out a Christmas tree for Mia Deaven, 15. “The xmas spirit is strong in this one,” according to Ms. Deaven’s father David. “Look at the size of that thing,” Mr. Deaven said, referring to the tree Ms. Deaven had picked out.

IT’S A TRAP!

MS. DEAVEN IN THE TRAP.

DELAFIELD, WI – A hidden menace threatens consumers across America, if they take their teenage daughters shopping. “I was on a mission to get paper towels, toilet cleaner and coffee,” said David Deaven. “All of a sudden there was a bright light, and Mia got pulled into a vortex of colorful items.” Mr. Deaven tried to rescue his daughter but was unable to pull her from the aisle. “The shelves had gibberish written on them, meaningless words... it was terrifying.” Ms. Deaven reportedly escaped after 10 minutes with 2 small bottles of some sort of soap, valued at $47.

MASTER YODA HOLDS YOU IN SUCH HIGH ESTEEM

MR. SPIKE.

DELAFIELD, WI – Residents of this small town were saddened to hear about the passing of Spike Deaven, 11. Known for his Zen ways, Spike was much loved for most of his activities, by most people. “There was a lot of barf and pee to clean up with that cat,” said David Deaven, also of Delafield. “But he was as wise as master Yoda, in some very limited ways.” Spike is survived by his brother Zeus.

I FIND YOUR LACK OF FAITH DISTURBING

MS. DEAVEN PLAYING AT VIOLIN.

WALES, WI – Attendees of multiple orchestra concerts in the Kettle Moraine school district were treated to an evening of fine music incorporating violin played by Mia Deaven of Delafield. Now on her fifth year, Ms. Deaven has become proficient with the instrument she was fascinated with as a small child. Asked about his daughter’s accomplishment, Mia’s father remarked that he initially had little faith that her interest would continue. “She has worked hard at this, and done what she has through sheer force of will,” said Mr. Deaven.

IS IT... LEGAL?

MR. DEAVEN PIMPING HIS RIDE

DELAFIELD, WI – Passersby were deafened by the sound coming from a Celica operated by National Honor Society member Aidan Deaven, 17. “He installed a 750W stereo amplifier, and added underbody lighting,” said former NHS scholar David Deaven. “This is what academics are good for.”

HERE TO FORCE A SETTLEMENT

MR. DEAVEN NEGOTIATING.

KETTLE MORaine, WI – Basketball continues to be the sport of choice for Aidan Deaven, 17, of Delafield. Now playing on the varsity team, Mr. Deaven continues to develop as an excellent rebounder and outside shooter.
