What We Did With Our Precious Time

WITCH TERRORIZES SCHOOL

THE WITCH.

WALES, WI – School children at Wales Elementary were terrorized by a witch that appeared shortly before Halloween and was strangely adept at mathematics and science. The witch’s intent seemed centered on reading books; according to Ms. Dahm, a third grade teacher, “She gets her nose in a book and can’t seem to hear us any more.” Bystanders remarked that they would pray for the parents of the witch, should she continue to cast spells during her teenage years.

AREA MAN TO GET NEW IMPROVED JOB

DR. DEAVEN BEING REWARDED FOR A JOB WELL DONE.

FAIRFIELD, CT – Area man David Deaven took a new job this year as manager of software design controls at GE Healthcare. Asked by friends and relatives what he actually does all day, Dr. Deaven provided this photo of a typical day at the office in his current job as chief engineer, and muttered that “there will be less pie in the face, I can tell you that much.” Dr. Deaven’s wife, Jennifer, agreed that this is a step up, saying that “GE has been pretty good to our family but there have been too many pies in the face.”

WOMAN’S DÆMON VISIBLE

MS. DEAVEN AND DÆMON.

DELAFIELD, WI – Passersby were amazed to see area woman Jennifer Deaven with her dæmon in plain view. Though she is not known to have a great love of rodents, Ms. Deaven’s dæmon appears to be a mid-size male Rattus norvegicus. Thought to be an external representation of her inner character, the dæmon has sharp claws, loves chocolate, and is often seen performing parkour. According to Ms. Deaven’s son Aidan, 9, “Mom does do a lot of yoga but I would certainly not say that she is a master of l’art du déplacement.” Household members Spike and Zeus (Felis catus) could not be reached for comment.

AREA GIRL SWIMS

MS. DEAVEN IN THE WATER.

OSHKOSH, WI – Piranha swim team member Mia Deaven, 9, joined the YMCA team this year and is now competing in meets across Wisconsin. “I can do it myself,” said Ms. Deaven when asked by her parents if she needed any help getting ready for her next race. In between races, Ms. Deaven generally relaxes by swimming.

BOY MUM

MR. DEAVEN NOT GRANTING AN INTERVIEW.

DENVER, CO – Curious though they may be, residents will not be able to hear interviews with Aidan Deaven, 11. Neither will they be able to see pictures of him, and they will certainly not have the opportunity to review his homework workbook without a court order to do so. Mr. Deaven is now under US Federal Witness Protection, protecting his privacy from being photographed or interrogated by his parents. Details of his days at school, including what he did and who he spoke to or saw, are classified “secret” and may be discussed only on an as-needed basis.

SKI VERSUS SNOWBOARD

MS. DEAVEN (STANDING), MR. DEAVEN (SNOWBOARDING).

SALT LAKE CITY, UT – The Deaven family managed to avoid a trip to Colorado for their annual family ski trip. “We decided to give Utah powder a try this year,” said Mia Deaven, 9, on her way to the lift at Solitude. “Let’s do a black diamond run” shouted Ms. Deaven’s brother, Aidan, 11. Asked which of skis or snowboard were superior, both children agreed that more research was clearly needed.

BASKETBALL – A WAY OF LIFE

MR. DEAVEN IN ACTION.

DOUSMAN, WI – Spectators at weekly basketball tournaments held here are witness to a new player on the Kettle Moraine Junior Lasers select basketball team. Aidan Deaven, 11, joined the team this year and now spends most weeknights practicing basketball, most weekends playing basketball. “On other days I usually play dunk basketball in my room,” said Mr. Deaven. “My Mom hates the stomping and running but I need to keep my game on.”

PEE-WAUKEE TRI

MR. DEAVEN, OVERCOME WITH EXCITEMENT, AND HIS CHILDREN.

PEWAUKEE, WI – Area father David Deaven, 44, has been boasting about town in regard to his children’s participation in the 2009 Pewaukee triathlon, which Mr. Deaven also participated in and somehow managed to finish. “It’s cold out here!” said Mr. Deaven’s daughter Mia, 9, huddling against her father after leaving the water. The three expect to participate in the event in 2010, but have been unable to enlist wife and mother Jennifer Deaven, who prefers to sleep in.

DANCE SHOW MUCH BETTER THAN ‘CATS’

ONE OF MANY SHOW STUNTS.

BROOKFIELD, WI – Attendees of the 2009 Studio One dance spectacular agreed that the run away hit of the show was a dance number set to the South Pacific show tune honeybun and performed by the young dancers and their fathers. “It was much better than Cats, I’d see it again and again,” reported audience member Jennifer Deaven.

STONEHENGE REBUILT

MS. DEAVEN NEEDLESSLY TOILING IN HER SUBURBAN BACKYARD.

ROCKESHA, WI – Residents observed area woman Jennifer Deaven, 43, moving boulders by hand last fall. Claiming that the rocks were domestic landscaping, Ms. Deaven nevertheless arranged them in patterns familiar to students of neolithic culture, aligning them to the sun’s position at summer solstice. Ms. Deaven’s husband David notes that while Stonehenge required approximately 30 million hours of manual labor, Ms. Deaven spent only 12 hours before requesting the rental of modern hydraulically-powered construction equipment in order to finish the job.

BASEBALL RULES

PREPARING TO DELIVER.

WALES, WI – Local boy Aidan Deaven, 11, increased his participation in sports 4055% over last year in an attempt to rebel against his mostly sedentary parents. “I love baseball,” said Mr. Deaven, before challenging his father, David Deaven, to a game of backyard wiffle ball that the younger Mr. Deaven would almost certainly win.

FUTURE LIONS VISIT THE SHRINE

THE DEAVEN CHILDREN WORSHIPPING THE NITTANY LION.

STATE COLLEGE, PA – The Deaven family vacationed in the Pennsylvania Poconos, took beach trips in summer and fall, went skiing in spring, and toured Rice University in fall. They also made the pilgrimage to the Nittany Lion shrine in Happy Valley. Eyes glistening with joy, youngsters Aidan and Mia Deaven beheld, touched, sat on, and posed with the sacred 13-ton limestone lion. The children’s father, David, fondly recalled consuming various malt beverages in and around the vicinity while pursuing a degree in the late 80s. “I once slept in the shrubs over here!” said a beaming Mr. Deaven, sending the wrong message to his impressionable children.
